Volunteer!

Work is always needed on the trails

There is always a great deal of work to keep up the trails. The staff at Lee State Natural Area does their best at keeping the trails in good riding condition, but with a little help from some local organizations and businesses the trails have been greatly improved. Progress Energy employees come out once a year to provide volunteer maintenance on the trails. The South Carolina Horsemen's Council has also had much influence in the betterment of the trails. Lee has also received a helping hand from the Wateree Correctional Institute. If you belong to a riding club and would like to donate your time, please call (803) 428-5307.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S Lee STATE NATURAL AREA HORSE TRAILS

Lee State Natural Area sits along the winding and scenic Lynches River. The twelve miles of horse trails on the park provide a rider with the chance to view the wonders of the sandy coastal plains of South Carolina as well as the wetlands along the beautiful Lynches River. As riders follow the sandy trails through enormous longleaf pines, they will see a variety of different species of plants and animals. White-tailed deer are common. Along the Loop Road, riders will parallel the Lynches River, seeing many wetland species of plant and animal like river oats and the colorful wood duck.
